HOLDING OUT

Watching the after-chapel jam at the mailboxes, one senior commented, "[GC students] are different now compared to my freshman year. There aren't so many earth-tones anymore." The implication? Students are less concerned about social and world issues and are more concerned about "getting ahead."

It's hard to prove, but certainly in a time that is not very favorable to traditional Mennonite ideals like simplicity and selflessness, GC has not escaped unscathed. With the return of the American hero in the form of Rambo, the rise of yuppies and the conservative right, is GC's identity emerging as unique or common? The bottom line — is GC holding out, keeping those things that set it apart?

Nicole Clymer

Sue Leatherman

A bleak outlook at the beginning of the year shrouded the campus with a low morale and many questions. Declining enrollment and the rising cost of a college education called for sharp budget cuts, threatening such things as GC's hallmark SST program and faculty sabbaticals. GC was faced with the challenge of holding onto its strongly rooted tradition of integrating learning and the Christian faith while at the same time struggling to redefine its identity and direction in changing times.

With current trends suggesting a mainstream approach to attract more students, and while the college wrestled with ways to cut $500,000 from the budget, recognition from national publications helped to reaffirm GC's uncommon features. Goshen College is one of the 221 "best buys in college education," The New York Times reported in October. One month later, U.S. News and World Report listed GC among "America's best colleges," citing specifically the college's international education opportunities.

With this encouragement, the administration worked to keep those things that are important to GC's tradition of "Culture for Service" — in particular, SST and sabbaticals, which faculty often take in foreign locations. Features such as these stood the test, President Stoltzfus said, "because we decided that those things weren't just frosting on the cake, but central, vital parts of our identity."

Joy Frey

In times when a two-day fad is old news, tradition is often forgotten. Avoiding short-sighted quick fixes or a ride on the mainstream bandwagon, GC has made tough choices to weather the current crises and prepare for a future that relies less on political fads and fashion and more on a strong sense of tradition and identity.

GC emerges from a year of sacrifice and difficult decision holding out, keeping those things that make it special among colleges. A renewed sense of identity and direction built on a rich tradition prepares it for the choices and changes of the future.

Three new career tracks were added to the art curriculum — graphic design, interior design and architecture drawing. The department expanded in other ways, too: the recently vacated mailing room in the basement of the art building created the needed space for a new 3-D classroom.

"The art building has always been my escape," senior Lena Nissley said. "It's got character. Every other place on campus is enveloped in this academic shroud, but the art building is a hodgepodge of a little bit of everything. It's really exciting."

PHILOSOPHY / HISPANIC MINISTRIES

Moral Philosophy was a popular class in the Bible and religion department. For the first time the class was taught by the first incumbent of the endowed chair in philosophy, former president J. Lawrence Burkholder.

The department also sponsored the first Moral Philosophy chair lecture on peace and pacificism by Bowling Green University professor and author Don Scherer.

"The Bible and religion program has given me a broad base through a presentation of a wide variety of theologies," said senior David Miller. "We are able to get outside a strictly Mennonite perspective."

"The bottom line is, the Hispanic Ministries program at Goshen College has succeeded in educating leadership for the Mennonite Church," read the Hispanic Ministries department's seventh-year evaluation.

Students visited Spanish-speaking churches in Iowa and Pennsylvania as part of this leadership preparation.

"I appreciate the program's flexibility," said sophomore Noel Santiago. "We don't just learn in the classroom. We visit churches and keep in touch. The Hispanic church needs more professionals and I feel this is what my classes are preparing me for."

BIOLOGY / CHEMISTRY

"The biology department gives students the strongest possible background for whatever field they choose," said professor of biology Jonathan Roth. It is no wonder, then, that GC ranked 42 out of 1500 colleges in the number of graduates completing Ph.D.s in the life sciences, or that over ninety percent of the graduates who apply to medical school get accepted.

For marine biology students, a new laboratory in Layton, Florida was completed and dedicated on May 3.

"I enjoy studying in an environment flavored with academic excellence and Christian values. Personal relationships with both students and professors help to focus my perspectives in biology," said junior biology major Kevin Graber.

In the chemistry department a hands-on approach to using scientific instruments is encouraged where students rather than professors operate instruments in labs.

"When much scientific research is defense related, one must consider the appropriateness of a scientific vocation. With my tools of thought sharpened by the demanded precise thinking, I can creatively allow my faith, instead of the Department of Defense, to give direction," said senior chemistry major Jim Martin.

After two years of dramatic growth, enrollment in the communication program steadied this year at approximately 50 majors and 30 minors. For the first time, reporting classes used the word processors in the Shertz Computer Center, aiming for improved writing and editing. Senior Nabil Oudeh won the annual C. Henry Smith Peace Contest with a speech discussing the conflicts between the Jews and Arabs.

"Communication is so broad and you can use it many areas," said junior Stan Martin. "Theater, speech, broadcasting — you're going to be using communication no matter what you're doing in life."

"I feel I have a lot of freedom to pursue my hobby and major with knowledgeable students and staff around me," said freshman computer major David Godshall.

The department also provided vital computing services for other academic and administrative divisions. An above average student-computer ratio of 16:1 allowed free facility access for all students.

Every fall 40-50 education students get hands-on experience in the classroom by student-teaching for eight weeks.

This year the bi-annual Christians in Education conference focused on "Teaching as a Ministry." John J. Smith, director of Teacher Education, said, "As the job market opens up, predictions are that the demand for teachers will be greatest in church schools and in developing countries, where salaries are lower and teaching is more demanding."

FOREIGN LANGUAGE

With the Mennonite Historical Library and Archives housed on campus and The Mennonite Quarterly Review edited and published at GC, the history department stays on the cutting edge of Mennonite history and culture.

The senior seminar reduced the usually large amount of research required and put more emphasis on relating the field and practice of history to Christian faith.

"Studying history — to paraphrase one of my profs — makes the foreign familiar and the familiar foreign. On the one hand, you gain a sense of continuity with other times and cultures. On the other hand, you have to question many ideas you'd otherwise take for granted," said senior history major Richard Beyler.

Emphasis on the mastery of oral skills is integral to learning French, German and Spanish at Goshen. Even advanced literature courses are taught in the native language.

Since the department is really three in one — French, German and Spanish — common activities such as afternoon tea parties were held to get all language majors together, providing a sense of departmental unity.

Besides teaching on all levels of public and private schools, P.E. majors joined hospital physical therapy departments, were involved in municipal recreation and camping, and assisted in community development.

Sports management, which combines business with sports, and sports communication for those interested in sports journalism were two new areas of concentration several students took up.

Along with its continuing work for Bell Labs, the department also began a research program to study titanium nitride in connection with Notre Dame.

"Because the physics department is small, there is good rapport between students and profs," said senior Doug Mast, a Turner Fellowship recipient. "I like the fact that I can do real, significant scientific research as an undergraduate."

"Every kind of music is a language with its own vocabulary and grammar which can say and do things none of the others can. But I've found that you can learn an incredible amount about a person or a culture by listening well to their music," said senior music major Jay Kauffman.

"They feel nurses with a four-year degree get a firmer foundation in anatomy and physiology, and have more flexibility and ability to be leaders." With an emphasis on recruitment this year, the department began an alumni newsletter, "GC Nursing News," as a way to keep in touch with graduates and contact prospective students.

PSYCHOLOGY / SOCIOLOGY / SOCIAL WORK

"A lot of people are attracted to psychology to solve their own problems, so you end up with a lot of really screwed up people in the field. The GC psychology department has integrity — psychology needs more integrity," said sophomore psychology major Bruce Unruh.

Faculty and student research looked into student learning styles and Mennonite church members' attitudes towards church agencies.

In mid-March the department hosted a conference of Mennonite psychologists in academia and research to discuss psychology and the Anabaptist faith.

With excellent practicum experiences in the Elkhart community and nearby Chicago, social work majors got hands-on training which let them see issues and problems in a direct way. In the fall social work majors organized a day-long workshop on "Violence in the Family."

Cross-cultural studies in Latin American societies and Mennonite studies are a plus in the sociology department. Practicums in locations such as the London Mennonite Centre and the Center for Community Justice and Designs for Change in Chicago gave direct contact with society, something not found in textbooks.

Social institutions such as the family, the neighborhood unit, and the enigmatic identity of 'what it means to be Chinese' are so strong they seem to fill the gaps where American youth are forced to ask questions. Yet, although my Chinese friends didn't understand modern art and thought that American nursing homes were inherently cruel and I couldn't understand their reverence for their families or for Deng Xia Ping, we could laugh away evenings drinking pijou, playing cards or sipping tea in tea houses."

The fall Haiti SST unit led by Kathy Bartel and Russ Binkley was to be the last one in that country for the year. On February 3 Arlin Hunsberger announced to the winter Haiti SSTers, "We're going to Jamaica... tomorrow morning." This signalled the first change in location of an SST unit. SSTers coped with the tensions of political discontent in the 29th year of the Duvalier dynasty. Jonathan Shenk said, "There's nothing like the sound of bullets to fall asleep by." President Duvalier left for France two days after the SSTers left for Kingston, Jamaica. In the spring the group originally slated for Haiti went instead to Guadeloupe, a country that had been used as an SST location several years ago.

THE PAINS AND THE GAINS

"The state of the college this November 9 is more fragile than it was one year ago in spite of heroic giving by associates, alumni, church and individuals," said President Victor Stoltzfus in his state-of-the-college address.

GC enrollment dropped by eight percent to 872 full-time students compared to 940 a year ago. The class of 1989 had only 170 members, the smallest in a number of years. Richard Gerig, Director of Admissions, noted, "We are affected by a buyers' market in colleges. There is much more competition for fewer students." To counteract this all-time low in enrollment, the admissions office underscored recruitment methods such as home visits to prospective students, communicating directly with parents and improving financial aid. As a result of these efforts applications were significantly greater than the year before.

In response to spiralling costs and declining enrollment, the board of overseers recommended a $500,000 budget cut. This translated to a reduction in President-Stoltzfus' and Vice President Alice Roth's salaries. Also, certain SST locations, the continuing education program, staff positions and academic departments were scrutinized and trimmed where necessary.

Despite the gloomy fall forecast, there was encouraging news. The new Sauder Center on the second floor of High Park was completed to house the sociology, social work, anthropology and women's studies departments. The Lilly grant donation of $387,500 and Harold and Thelma Schrock's grant of $1.14 million was channelled to renovate the Science Hall beginning spring 1987.

Also, GC acquired national recognition. Edward B. Fiske, education editor for the New York Times in his book The Best Buys in College Education praised Goshen's SST program, concluding that GC, with its emphasis on service and peace, is an "unusual place in turbulent times." A U.S. News & World Report survey (November 1985) ranked Goshen among the top 32 "smaller, comprehensive institutions" in the U.S.

In a student survey conducted in the fall, ninety-eight percent of the respondents stated that they're satisfied with their education at Goshen.

Bertie (Kevin Bacher) inspects the remedy Jeeves (Eric Miranda) has concocted for his hangover in Jeeves Takes Charge.

Students performed a variety of one-acts throughout the year. Senior Naomi Kroeker directed the humorously irreverent Sister Mary Ignacious: Explains it all for you in the fall. Senior John Shoup left audiences wondering about the truth in his production White Liars.

A Christmas Carol and Jeeves Takes Charge, directed by juniors Melody Yeazell and Fred Redekop respectively, ushered in the holiday season in dramatic style. The classic Dickens tale and the P.G. Wodehouse comedy were performed just before Christmas break.

Students of the winter trimester's directing class presented a series of one-acts during reading days in April. In all, seven plays, from the comic to the absurd, were performed during two successive nights in the Umble Center.

Lost in a world of glass, Laura (Naomi Kroeker) muses over her menagerie.

The Gentleman Caller (Fred Redekop) advises Laura to "think of yourself as superior in some way!"

THE GLASS MENAGERIE

"Why are you so restless?"--Amanda (Janet Liechty) worries over her son Tom (Richard Beyler).

Gathered at Shen Te's tobacco shop, the villagers of Setzuan grumble over their misfortunes.

THE GOOD WOMAN OF SETZUAN

"Buy my water, you dogs!" cries the waterseller Wong (Greg Smucker).

The hapless flyer Yang Sun (Myron Miller) and the good woman Shen Te (Mary Beth Miller) meet in the park.

The Glass Menagerie is a memory play--Tom's memory.

He recalls the 30's "when the huge middle class of America was matriculating in a school for the blind."

The GC Players presented Tennessee Williams' play during the first two weekends of November. Director Lauren Friesen said, "The scenes and characters are important for college students since it's a play about finding a place in society, in life."

In The Good Woman of Setzuan three gods come looking for a good person.

Shen Te, a prostitute, is the only choice. They give her money hoping to help her, but she is soon caught in a bind between pure goodness and shrewd business politics. The gods finally abandon the people to solve their own problems.

Shen Te says in the end, "It is for you to find a way, my friends, to help good men arrive at happy ends..."

The play by Bertolt Brecht was the Player's winter production.

Doyle Preheim hits a middle C to tune up before practice.

Chamber Choir members Jay Roth and Brad Lehman are intent on producing clear enunciation in a practice of Bach's Jesus, Priceless Treasure.

CHORAL GROUPS

Chamber Choir performs Jim Clemens' "Hymn of Confession" during their March home concert.

Chorale presents their music to a campus audience after winter tour.

Chamber Choir was the featured choral group at the Indiana Music Educators Association Convention in October. Dr. Earl Mann, session chair, stated: "You have presented some of the greatest choral literature in a very professional and ultimately musical manner."

In November Chamber Choir and Chorale joined community members to perform Felix Mendelssohn's Elijah. Accompanying them was the Orchestra under the baton of Lon Sherer.

Chamber Choir dressed in Renaissance garb and serenaded from table to table at the madrigal dinner in December. Chorale women also presented several numbers.

Chorale took a mid-Winter break to tour Ohio and Pennsylvania. Their program featured white and black spirituals, praise songs such as Handel's "Day by Day" and songs on the life of Christ such as Alice Parker's "The Wine."

Chamber Choir headed west to Hesston College where they joined forces with Hesston's Bel Canto Singers for a performance of J.S. Bach's Jesus, Priceless Treasure, accompanied by the Chamber Orchestra.

Well-known artists such as Bach and Pachelbel and lesser known artists such as Marenzid and Zytowski were included in Chamber Choir's repertoire. Of special interest were two original compositions by music students Brad Lehman and James Clemens.

Yang Lin and Mandy Dutton keep pace with the Chorale on Handel's "Day by Day."

Practicing long hours to accompany a full performance of Mendelssohn's

Elijah with the Oratorio Chorus, the GC Orchestra cancelled its annual fall concert. For the first time, in March the Chamber Orchestra toured Kansas with Chamber Choir. They accompanied Chamber Choir and Hesston College's Bel Canto Singers in a performance of J.S. Bach's Jesus, Priceless Treasure.

The Orchestra also accompanied the annual Concerto-Aria winners: pianist Julie Albrecht played Mozart's Piano Concerto in B flat, soprano soloist Brenda Witmer sang Reinhold Gliere's Concerto for Coloratura and trumpeter Mike Ruhling performed the allegro movement of Haydn's Trumpet Concerto in E flat.

The high-spirited Jazz Band filled the Union as usual for their semi-annual concerts with a stomping, roaring audience. The Band toured Pennsylvania and Ohio in the winter, performing at schools and churches. Music of Duke Ellington was a specialty along with vocalist Emily Smucker.

Jazz Band members give a tour de force concert to a Union-packed crowd.

INSTRUMENTAL GROUPS

Cellists Julia Friesen and Jeanne Liechty are all attention during an Orchestra rehearsal of Mendelssohn's Elijah.

The Pink Panther appears for director Phil Clemens' final concert with the Jazz Band.

"Send in the clowns..." sings vocalist Emily Smucker with Jazz Band accompanying.

The Orchestra pairs up with Concerto-Aria winner Julie Albrecht in a rendition of Mozart's Piano Concerto in B flat.

Orchestra violinists Melissa Yoder, Carl Lind and Rene Horst concentrate on backing up Concerto-Aria winner Brenda Witmer.

Innovations, awards and aspiring authors marked the year in student broadcasting and publications.

For WGCS 91.1.FM, GC's fine arts radio station, it was a year of growth. More students than ever took the broadcasting class and signed up for shifts. Two new music programs in jazz and contemporary Christian rock were added to the usual classical music format. Also, the newsletter "Friends of WGCS " was started to increase the number of listeners, making WGCS more independent financially.

Students developed all journalistic skills from news writing to paste-up in producing The Goshen College Record. Dave Treber, Jessica Lapp and Ann Helmuth took turns as editors in the fall, winter and spring. The Indiana Collegiate Press Association (ICPA) gave the Record four first place press awards for the best sports story, best news analysis, best photo essay and best editorial cartoon.

For the creatively inclined, Broadside is one literary outlet. The publication which appeared every 3-4 weeks featured student and faculty poetry and vignettes. Special highlights were poetry by The New Yorker poet Alistair Reid and American humorist Garrison Keillor.

The Pinchpenny Press is a chapbook publication established in 1967 by poet-in-residence Nick Lindsay. Jessica Lapp's Sunsets and Rosanna Landis' Strawberries and Shells were two books of short stories that appeared in the fall. In the winter, Pinchpenny published Fred Redekop's Cornucopia, a book of verse.

Freedom for expression, learning and growth are a few of the benefits of belonging to any of the various student groups.

The International Students Club organized and celebrated International Student Week at the end of February with readings in poetry, African and Haitian dance, special convocations and a supper cooked by international students featuring food from Thailand, India, Zimbabwe, Colombia and Palestine.

In its fifth year, the Goshen Student Women's Association (GSWA) continued to grow. GSWA planned workshops, forums and a Women's Emphasis Week to spur discussion and action about feminist issues. Also, GSWA provided Chocolate Houses with musical entertainment and special readings in prose and poetry.

Guest speakers, black music and poetry, and "soul food" were all part of Black History Week in mid-February organized by the Black Student Union (BSU). Also, BSU planned movies and activities for Martin Luther King Day in January. In the fall, the BSU raised $1500 for black freshman scholarships with a volleyball marathon.

The Missions Club met once a month to discuss and explore overseas mission work. In mid-November the club went on a Missions Retreat at the 1711 Center in Elkhart.

In late September the Latino Student Union performed skits and songs in convocations on the theme "myth and reality" which exposed stereotypes about Latin Americans. In March the club organized a coffee house with dance, poetry, drama and singing that celebrated Latin American culture.

The Peace Society responded to the Mexican earthquake by designating November 9 as a workday for students to work for local people and raise relief money to send to Mexico through the Mennonite Central Committee (MCC). In the winter the club planned a Central America Emphasis with films and special forums. Seventeen students attended the Inter-collegiate Peace Fellowship Conference at Messiah College in Pennsylvania.

Peace Society members Phil Detweiler and Don Blosser meet to discuss plans for an October trip to the ecumenical "Called to be Peacemakers" convention.

The opportunities to express opinions, learn and develop leadership skills benefit anyone involved in GC's student groups.

The Student Central Council(SCC) began the year by trying to change library hours to close at 11 P.M. instead of 5 P.M. on Fridays. Devon Yoder, the Head Librarian, finally compromised to leave the first floor of the library open till 8 P.M. on Saturdays.

March was "energy awareness" month when SCC ran a mini-campaign to curb energy use at GC in an effort to lower costs and tuition inflation in the long run.

Working out a mentor-mentee program to help new international students assimilate into life at Goshen was also on SCC's agenda.

The Campus Activities Council(CAC) cut down on larger activities such as movies in the Umble Center and music concerts, replacing them with smaller "drop-in activities." So there were regular videos on the wide screen TV in the Leaf Raker and fewer movies in the Umble Center.

More coffee houses in the Leaf Raker with a variety of free entertainment — such as folk singing and jazz concerts — were also planned by the CAC.

It was important for the CAC to try and work with various student groups, such as different dorm floors, to support all aspects of campus social life.

The 244 graduates of 1986 identified themselves with tradition by donning black robes. It was the first time since the late 60's that a GC graduating class had worn the customary dress.

Also revived was the tradition of a senior gift drive. The different majors competed in giving $1,222.50 for freshman scholarships.

Seniors' parents got a comical look at their childrens' college days when seniors performed a combination of "Saturday Night Live" and "Late Night With David Letterman" show. Features included "Stupid Trumpet Tricks" and GC's own "International Quartet."

At the baccalaureate service President Victor Stoltzfus admonished graduates to hold onto their roots, saying, "all of us need our past. The flattering myth of self-sufficiency lasts only as long as your problems are smaller than you are."

Commencement speaker Parker J. Palmer urged seniors to "take the gifts of rationality and put them in the heart," adding, "It is not enough to be a critic, one must also be a maker, a creator."

Champions! Work and determination made the underdog field hockey team NAIA District 21 champions for the first time in GC's history. "I'm totally ecstatic about winning. We played our hearts out and things fell into place," said coach Pert Shetler after the team swept Marion, Earlham and DePauw in one weekend to capture the title. The standout team finished with an 8-8-2 overall record.

Active. From a weekend ping-pong tournament to the winter basketball leagues, intramurals continued to be one of the most popular organized student activities. "Intramurals provide a lot of different needs for a lot of different people," said Dwain Hartzler, director of student activities. "It is a means to be involved in sports for competition and fun, realizing they are not exclusive."

Exceptional. Posting a 10-1 record, the women's tennis team had their best season ever, winning the Hoosier Conference for Women and narrowly missing the District 21 Championship. "The team's spirit and commitment made even the hard work a time to remember with pleasure," said coach Ruth Gunden.

Close. Although the men's tennis team didn't win any championships, they just missed by placing third out of thirteen teams in the Mid-Central Conference. "The men had excellent spirit and worked well together as a team," coach Harold Yoder said of the squad that finished with an 8-3 overall record.

SOCCER

Turnaround. What began as a rebuilding season caught fire at midseason. After a slow 2-6 start, the 1985 Maple Leaf soccer team rallied and finished 9-7 overall, winning the Mid-Central Conference and extending its conference championship tradition to nine straight years. With possession and patient passing, the team relied more on hard work than pure athletic skill. "This season was a maturation process--finding leadership, getting used to each other--everybody was involved," said coach Dwain Hartzler.

Rising to the occasion, Karen S. Yoder and Bonnie Miller make a handy duo on defense.

Balance. An aggressive attack, smart passing and strong serving led the 1985 Maple Leaf volleyball team to an overall record of 22-10. The team peaked at season's end to win the Hoosier Conference for Women with a perfect game and match. "It wasn't just a single person that made us play well," said coach Sue Roth, "it was a strong team effort."

Frustrated. The men's basketball team suffered through a 4-19 season, spurring questions about the need for athletic scholarships and a review of the basketball program. "I felt like we had more talent than we displayed," Coach Ed Gore commented. "The frustration the team felt just became overwhelming." The host Maple Leafs posted a 1-1 record in the 18th Annual Menno Classic held November 29-30 with men's teams from Bethel, Bluffton, EMC and Goshen competing. This cooperative and well-organized effort attracted large crowds and was a bright spot in an otherwise dismal season.

A deep bench early in the season dwindled to just three reserves by January. Weathering the player losses, the team won with a close-knit corps of 8.

Seniors Bonnie Miller and Sally Hunsberger confer on the court. Good communication was a big part of the Leaf's championship season.

Culmination. NAIA District 21 Coach of the Year Linda "Pert" Shetler led "the best team I've coached" to an overall 16-8 record and a tie with Manchester for the winner's trophy in the new Hoosier Conference for Women. Shetler said, "The seniors knew this was the year to do it and everybody worked together towards that goal.

This year was the climax of several years of working together." A year of firsts, the team advanced to NAIA district tournament, losing to the top-ranked team by five points in the first round. The women also participated in the Menno Classic for the first time, defeating both EMC and Bluffton.

Brenda Ervin made things happen for the Leafs: her performance leading to a position on the all-NAIA District 21 team.

Upbeat. The 1985 Maple Leaf cross-country team outlasted extracurricular conflicts to finish second in the Mid-Central College meet at season's end. The spirited team was led by Fred Kem, overall winner at the Mid-Central meet. "We started at the bottom and I thought we might be there all year," said coach John Ingold, "but everybody gave and we did well. Not every team can do it.

Competence. With only eight members, the men's track team managed to tie for seventh place out of ten teams at the District meet at Taylor. At the conference meet at Huntington, the men braved muggy hot rain to place a close third after Huntington and Grace. Joachim Oberst and Fred Kem, the two top runners, made it to the NAIA national collegiate track and field meet at Arkansas Tech University where Joachim placed eighth out of fifteen runners. Coach Ed Gore said, "People aren't doing track just to compete. They're doing it because it's good for them — we have a lot of fun."

Becky Yoder smashed old records in the triple, long and high jump, becoming the All Conference winner. In the new Hoosier Conference for Women, GC placed second after Manchester, followed by Anderson and Earlham. "I like working with this hard-working, but fun, optimistic group," said coach Sue Roth.

A good blend. For the first time the 1985-86 Maple Leaf baseball team qualified for the District 21 baseball tournament with an 18-13 record overall. Through donations and their own fund-raising efforts, the team was able to take spring training in March at the Show Me Baseball Camp in Reed Springs, MO. "We had a good blend of experience and enthusiasm," said coach Harold Yoder. "We also had a little luck with the defense and the offense helping each other out at the right times."

Doug Gerber's big lead draws a throw from the pitcher.

Precocious. A young and inexperienced golf team surprised many opponents in the District 21 Tourney at season's end, finishing fourth out of 12 teams, their best showing to date. A 2-10 record in the conference was offset by a perfect 3-0 record in dual meets. Said coach John Ingold, "We showed improvement during the season. I felt we would have some surprises. In the last meet we put it all together, beating all the conference schools."

TRENDS

Tradition and modern drift clashed until they meshed into a tension that captured campus spirit.

CD players made their way into dorm rooms and students began to collect the discs that threatened the original turntable with extinction. Tunes from Top-40 radio stations catering to "Madonna Wannabes" were barely tolerated in the cafeteria and definitely shunned at FOP dances. GC's musical taste varied from Bach and Beatles classics to New Wave, funk and reggae.

While the country expressed its traditional spirit by demanding Classic Coke, Goshen's dislike for passing popularity was seen through the emergence of twenty-year-old heavy-weight bicycles as the mode of transportation.

“ The juxtaposition of granola values and 1986 fashions was to be expected from classes of future muppies. ”

The struggle between the old and the new was evident in students' apparel. Although Goodwill fashion was still favored, often a budget shop sweater was paired with the latest shirt from Forenza or Perry Ellis jeans. The juxtaposition of granola values and 1986 fashions was to be expected from classes of future muppies whose social conscience was torn by Money magazine's advice to invest in big businesses and Sojourners' plea to boycott certain international corporation products.

Zhang Rong-Jian shares fall colors with some young friends.

Row One: Tang Pei-Sheng, Chen Lian-Ke, Zhang Shun-Fu and Sun Kai-Xiang. Row Two: Zhang Rong-Jian, Zhang Quan-Cong (China Educational Exchange), Xia Zheng. Row Three: Xie Hua-Li, Huang Tai-Quan and Wang-Shou-Chuan.

Nine Chinese scholars made up the sixth group to visit GC since exchange began in 1980. Exploring the community, the group took weekly field trips to local points of interest such as an RV factory and the Shpshewana Flea Market. They also took longer excursions to Detroit, New York City, Philadelphia, and Chicago where they attended a PUSH rally and met with the Rev. Jesse Jackson. Besides adding an international perspective to the classes they attended, members of the group gave an acupuncture demonstration, prepared a Chinese meal, and taught the art of Chinese shadow boxing at college and community gatherings during the year.

LEISURETIME

What do you do in those moments when you realize you're not only here to get a degree — to break out of the humdrum of rigid schedules?

"Sometimes I go with friends to Chicago for a Cubs game during the day," says senior Darrel Wisseman. Indeed, Chicago is popular Mecca for GC students who drive two hours to spend a day eating various ethnic foods, hitting the Magnificent Mile stores, roaming through museums or simply catching the breeze off Lake Michigan.

Closer by is the millrace and pond. Students rent college canoes and spend a sunny afternoon simply drifting on the water and basking in the sun. Keeping fit by jogging along the picturesque millrace path is also a common pastime.

“ To type weird letters to friends on the word processor is an excellent way to forget academia! ”

Next door to Goshen is Baintertown, an easy get-away spot. This little haven has been long known for its wonderful fishing, canoeing and swimming. There's also a large sandy beach and trees from which students jump into the lake.

A long-time favorite, the Olympia Candy Kitchen, had competition for the student sweet tooth with the reopening of a renovated South Side Soda Shop. The new hang-out draws the college crowd with old-fashioned ice cream, a 45-cent "bottomless" cup of coffee and a jukebox playing Benny Goodman and Little Richard.

Of course, Goodwill, Salvation Army and Yoder's Budget Shop are always places students explore for cheap clothes that catch the fancy.

In the end, there are as many things to do as there are students on campus. "When I have free time I sometimes make hot chocolate and read a book not required for a class," says senior Jessica Lapp. For sophomore Barb Nickel, to "type weird letters to friends on the word processor" is an excellent way to forget academics!

Coffee and soda fuel a conversation between Lynette Beck and Emily Smucker at the South Side Soda Shop.

Rick DeLeon, Jay Kennel and Jeff Aeschliman tramp their own way through February snow at the millrace.

A hammock and an old yearbook are all Julie Albrecht needs for a mid-afternoon break.

Lorin Beidler takes his time searching for winter clothing at Yoder's Budget Shop.

Lining up a corner shot in the Union games-room is old hat for Heidi Wenger.

CHINESE VISITORS

Bonnie Miller, Deb Fisher and Lisa Kratz anticipate roast pork and academic freedom during the end-of-the-year senior pig roast.

RESTAURANT CRACKERS LOUNGE

Goshen's Holiday Inn opened the new Crackers Lounge in the winter, providing an evening hot spot for students.

NIGHT LIFE

Nighttime is the right time to push back the books and take a break. Nightlife in this midwestern town called for some creativity, but students did find their favorite havens for diversion and relaxation.

Occasional FOP dances gave students chances to get together off-campus and move spontaneously to the sounds of favorites like REM or The Talking Heads. In a more formal setting, the Crackers lounge at the Holiday Inn was a place to unwind, on the dance floor or talking with friends.

The popular all-night coffee pots at Azar's and Mr. Donut gave insomniacs and late-night studiers a place to take a break or satisfy nocturnal appetites. Other nocturnal appetites were satisfied at informal get-togethers off-campus.

“ Nighttime is the right time to push back the books and take a break. ”

For others the movies were the place to go, whether it was a first-run theater in Elkhart, a two-dollar flick downtown, or the midnight showing of the Rocky Horror Picture Show at University Park Mall in South Bend. The big-screen TV in the Leafraiser also provided weekend entertainment with free movies and plenty of free popcorn.

With empty wallets at the end of the fall term, midnight madness raged and academic stress was relieved in a campus-wide snowball fight. Total entertainment cost was a single Westlawn window and a dozen wet socks.

“ Throughout these last four years I have been challenged by several new ideas and beliefs. I have become aware and concerned about political issues and world peace. Through my SST experience I have learned to appreciate other cultures. I can now see the needs of our world in relation to the deprived and poverty-stricken population more realistically. Many of my religious beliefs have changed, with one example being Anabaptism. I have found these to be positive changes. ”

“My greatest concern is that music avoid pretentiousness. If a musician strives to demonstrate his or her abilities with the primary purpose of presenting ‘entertainment,’ I think that the vital meaning of music is missing. Music is a very personal form of communication in which the participants must give themselves to the experience. It cannot be a commodity.”

Nancy and Jim Lapp, Campus Ministers

An interpretive dance sets the mood for an all-campus worship celebration with the theme of "Presenting Our Bodies as Instruments of Worship."

The Quiet Place gives students a hideaway for prayer and meditation.

Students belt out their favorites at a Chapel Hymnsing.

Susan Vandenberg, Anne Coffman and Janelle Maust take part in a mid-winter all-campus worship celebration.

Johannes Lichti checks out service opportunities during the Mission Service Emphasis Days sponsored by Campus Ministries.

SPIRITUALITY

"Hope is one of the most urgent needs in society, and it is a vital theme of Christian faith," remarked campus minister Jim Lapp during the Festival of Hope week in early fall which pulled together students for a renewal of Christian commitment.

A practical faith was not lacking among GC students. During World Hunger Day, students took part by giving money and canned food to La Casa.

Students also took initiative in spirituality. The World Christian Fellowship, founded by students, committed itself to bringing together Christians of different national and ethnic backgrounds.

Enthusiasm for spirituality showed in the continuous campus-wide worship services, small groups and student-led chapels. Even in the formidably cold winter mornings students and faculty gathered at the Broken Shields sculpture for prayer.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

While it's easy to get lost in the shuffle of books and exams, the issues of "the real world" do touch the lives of students and faculty, inspiring comment and reaction.

In response to the Mexico City earthquake in September, students and faculty raised nearly $2,000 in relief funds. Campus ministries took special offerings and students chopped wood, washed windows and did other odd jobs in the community to earn money for this relief effort.

On January 20 the campus celebrated the first official Martin Luther King, Jr. Day. Lectures and films throughout the day served to commemorate and reaffirm Dr. King's struggle for equality and human rights.

A student group led by Doug Kaufman and Randy and Greg Newswanger made a unique response to the popular issue of apartheid by raising money for South African Palesa Makhale to study at GC.

Political unrest toppled long-standing regimes in both the Philippines and Haiti. On February 4 the current SST unit in Haiti moved to Jamaica as a precautionary measure. Three days later the government fell as Haiti's President-for-Life, Jean-Claude Duvalier, fled to France. "There were cars bashed in everywhere," said senior Carey Miller, a Haiti SSTER at the time.

"Everyone was looting and the guards were trying to stop it... No place is safe."

On January 7 students saw via TV the space shuttle Challenger exploding seconds after lift-off. The escalation of terrorism shook the world, as did the United States' bombing of Libya on April 14. The threat of terrorism led to the cancellation of the summer art study tour in Florence, Italy.

Closer to campus, students and faculty got some food for thought in "...the issues of 'the real world' do touch the lives of students and faculty, inspiring comment and reaction."

the aftermath of an October 2 foodfight, one of the largest in GC history. In a letter to Record, junior Paul Mark said, "Most people were just trying to have fun... More than academic growth is stressed here, so...this food fight was taken personally."

The opinion board in the Union made space for student and faculty concerns and response, as well as the usual scrawls of graffiti. Record also served as a forum for issues ranging from requests to extend library hours to the desire for athletic scholarships.

Students and faculty used a variety of media to bring up the request for athletic scholarships. Matt Litwiller and Tom Eby make their statement at the winter carnival talent show.

Students and community members gathered April 14 in opposition to U.S. aid for Nicaragua contras. Crosses were planted bearing names of civilians killed by contras to make the nationwide statement sponsored by Witness for Peace and Pledge of Resistance.

Dave Moser lends a hand in response to the drive for "GC making an imprint on Mexico," initiated by Brígido Lopez.

A cafeteria table shows evidence of the October 2 food fight that stirred controversy and led eventually to the setting up of conduct guidelines for the cafeteria.

Greg Reeser

“Comparing students at Goshen College to students in Germany, I would say German students are much more aware [of the political situation].”

Joachim Oberst, Marburg,
Germany

“It is easy to forget the world outside the Westlawn gate; easy to feel safe in a Good Library carrel or a lab in Science Hall or a booth in the Leafrazer. Then an SST unit is forced to move to a new location and we really don't know what all the fuss is about...If we are informed then we can inform others around us who may, in their ignorance, spread misinformed rumors or speculations.”

Jessica Lapp

Pizza brings the residents and friends of Kulp 2 together for a party the hallway.

Jill Detweiler and Joy Zimmerly mop up the problem on Westlawn 3 as Linda Anneler and Janell Nofziger supervise.

Checker Lon Tupa awaits the supper crowd at the dining hall.

LIFE ON CAMPUS

Many students say living on-campus keeps them more in touch with what is happening. The dorm life offers easy access to Good Library, laundry and regular meals as well as plenty of friends close at hand for popcorn parties or a game of soccer in the hallway.

“I’m one of those people who forgets stuff... Living on campus... I use my time better.”

“Living off campus is time-consuming,” said senior Nabil Oudeh. “I’m one of those people who forgets stuff. I would get to class, sit down and there would be no pens or pencils. So I could just go back to Coffman and get one. Living on campus is more convenient. I use my time better.”

In an effort to encourage seniors to live in the dorms, the administration offered special rebates and proposed a senior floor with private rooms for next year. By year’s end about 100 seniors-to-be had signed up for on-campus housing, compared to the approximate fifty that were on campus during 1985-86.

Silence after the storm: Yoder 2's littered hallway attests to earlier shenanigans.

Susan Roth settles down for a phone conversation on Kulp 2.

A bicycle is basic transportation for off-campus commuter Mark Nyce.

Nate Kaufman and Mike Peachy hang out on their porch at 1410 South Eighth.

The naked truth: Dave Diller saves on home heating bills by showering at the gym.

Home cooking is a potpourri of peanut butter, salad, soup and plenty of dirty dishes.

Kent Hershberger and Emilie Stoltzfus team up to tackle the dinner dishes.

LIFE OFF CAMPUS

Despite incentives to live in the dorms, many older students still opted for the off-campus lifestyle. These students cited freedom from dorm regulations, privacy and escape well worth the added responsibility of living away from the campus. Monthly rent payments, grocery shopping at Kroger's and a pile of dirty dishes in the sink are just a few of the trade-offs students make for the privileges of an off-campus haven.

“It's nice to leave college behind and do 'home things' ”

“Living off-campus allows me to feel like an adult,” said senior Laurel Elias. “It's nice to leave college behind and do 'home things'— that's a privilege you don't have when you live in dorms. I appreciate the campus more when I can go away and come back. It's a more balanced lifestyle.”

“Being a Black on this campus is tough at times because of having to deal with people’s attitudes. I have to be strong in order not to blow up at people’s ignorance...”

Goshen College is where I chose to...get my education. Each year I change in different ways as I develop into the person that I’m to be. One thing that will never change is remembering that Black is Beautiful.”

*We're helping Elkhart County
grow!*

Commitment.

In our business, commitment spells results — quality, integrity, honesty.

At the Troyer Group, our commitment shows. In structures like the new First National Bank building in downtown Goshen.

We're committed to excellence.
And we're committed to the future of Elkhart County.
